Paul Kosieracki Shares His Experiences

Spacecoast Technical Network Hosts First Entrepreneurial Workshop

Paul Kosieracki, a 30 year veteran of global marketing and finance with the Kodak corporation, met with twenty STN members to deliver a two-hour workshop at the Fairfield Inn and Suites in Titusville. The workshop was entitled Financing and Structuring Your Start-up Business For Success. It was the first workshop offered to STN members that was organized and promoted by the STN. "Normally, our members are busy attending other people's functions, so for them to attend a business learning event of their own was a real treat," says Jerry Olguin, Director of Marketing and Public Relations for the group. The Spacecoast Technical Network focuses on three major areas: Employment, Education and Entrepreneurship, and is constantly striving to bring in speakers with information to help their members.

Friday's Speaker

Carol Craig

A self-described Unconventional CEO, Carol Craig is Founder and Chief Executive Officer of Craig Technologies, headquartered in Cape Canaveral, FL. Carol grew the business from her kitchen table with one person in 1999 to nearly 300 employees and $30M in revenues today.

Prior to her entrepreneurial pursuits, Carol served in the military as an active duty P-3C Orion Naval Flight Officer responsible for all tactical communication and navigation aboard combat aircraft. An engineer by trade, Carol consulted for the military as a designer of cockpit systems, and created and provided instruction in flight planning software systems.

This year, Carol negotiated and executed a Space Act Agreement with Kennedy Space Center for the loan of 1,600 pieces of specialty equipment once used to process NASA's Space Shuttle and support systems, and plans to open the Craig Technologies Aerospace & Defense Manufacturing Center in 2013 to provide support to defense, aerospace, transportation, energy and other industries.
