4 Tips for Staying Positive While Searching for a Job

Posted by April Greene

February 25, 2013

Searching for a job can be a formidable task, and whether you've been looking for a job for a few weeks or a few years, it's easy to feel discouraged. However, there are ways to counter self-doubt and make effective strides in your job hunt. Try these four tips for staying positive while looking for your next opportunity.

Create a daily routine.

For many people, losing the daily routine that comes with a job can be one of the most unsettling aspects of unemployment. If you find yourself struggling to stay organized or motivated, or becoming easily discouraged or anxious, implement new routines using your job search as a base. Setting up even a basic routine -perhaps a daily cocktail of one part surfing the want ads, one part networking, and one part researching your field, with a sprinkling of fresh fruit breaks and walks around the block-can really help keep you grounded.

New Embraer assembly plant to bring 600 jobs to Brevard

Gov. Rick Scott on Tuesday announced that Brazilian jet maker Embraer S.A. is planning to open an aircraft assembly plant at Melbourne International Airport, which will create 600 new jobs, Florida Today reports.

Embraer already operates existing facilities at the Melbourne airport that employ more than 260 people and will be opening a 63,500-square-foot Engineering & Technology Center in 2014 that will employ about 200 engineers.
