Friday's Meeting

Guest Speaker:

Martin McClellan: Confrontation Control

Martin McClellan is a martial arts instructor with 31 years experience in Tae Kwon Do (8 years) and Bujinkan Budo Taijutsu (23 years).

His experience in Budo Taijutsu has inspired the development of a course of instruction called Confrontation Control Curriculum. It is a training process that has been distilled from the principles of Taijutsu which is also known as Ninjutsu.

This week, members will view and be a part of a demonstration of these techniques and processes that will start you down a path that will allow you to survive a violent confrontation.

About Bujinkan Budo Taijutsu

By Peter White

Bujinkan Budo Taijutsu is a ancient Japanese martial art dating back 900 years that focuses on weapons, unarmed combat techniques and using multiple attackers. Commonly known as ninjutsu, Bujinkan actually incorporates nine ryu (schools) of martial arts, 3 of which are ninjutsu ryu and the other 6 are samurai ryu. The art therefore encompasses a wide range of traditional and modern applications of armed and unarmed fighting techniques. (More detail about these ryu and the skills learnt can be read below).

The Bujinkan Budo Taijutsu is founded and directed by Dr. Masaaki Hatsumi. The Bujinkan Dojo is located in Chiba Prefecture, Japan. The Bujinkan Dojo can be translated as "The Warrior Gods Training Hall".

The organisation that the Komichi Dojo comes under in Australia is called Bujinkan Budo Taijutsu, Australia. There are a number of organisations in Australia, but the BBTA is the only one with Japan trained instructors and we also help those who want to go to Japan. Throughout the year, seminars are held by various dojos from around the country to host special guests visiting our country who have trained in Japan for a considerable amount of time and show a wide range of different techniques being taught in Japan to the present day.
